Clean Air-Cool Planet presents a 2010 Climate Champion Award to Joanne Lamprey

Joanne Lamprey has a personal and professional commitment to reducing greenhouse gases. As president of Lamprey Brothers, an oil and HVAC company, she has redirected the company toward promoting and providing the means to use more sustainable energy practices. As a citizen, she made possible the creation of the New Hampshire Charitable Foundation's Climate Action Fund, which has supported data collection for the NH Climate Action Plan Task Force as well as outreach programs under the New England Carbon Challenge.

Many people remember a packed house at the Portsmouth Music Hall on April 5, 2007, when Lamprey Brothers sponsored a program – This Old Planet Needs a Friend, featuring Richard Trethewey, from the Emmy-award winning PBS television series "This Old House." The evening was emceed by Joanne Lamprey and included a lively interactive discussion included climate change, dependence on politically unstable parts of the world for oil, and the compromising of American values that decrease national and economic security. Sharing the stage with Trethewey were fellow panelists Dr. Tom Kelly, Director of UNH Office of Sustainability; Dr. Cameron Wake, Research Associate Professor at the UNH Climate Change Research Center and co-author of Climate Change in the U.S. Northeast; and Denise Blaha and Julia Dundorf, founders of the CA-CP/UNH program the New England Carbon Challenge.
